study showed that mastery goals were associated with motivation or engagement patterns and strategies that were consistent with a deep approach to learning. This approach was related to positive learning outcomes. In contrast, performance goals were associated with motivations and strategies that tended to be superficial in nature and consistent with a surface approach to learning and yielded a lower level of achievement (Grant and Dweck 2001).

Bibliography

