shared decision-making means participation of all teachers in all decisions. The idea was good and welcomed by teachers but the study result indicated a different picture. Shared decision-making has almost none to some negative impact on SI. In reality, evidence indicated that effective principals involved teachers in decision-making, taking into account the teachers’ expertise areas, professional capacities, and strategies (Dinham, 2007).

Bibliography

