the studies examining correlations between personality traits, especially the type A personality structure, and AS are insufficient restricts the comprehensive discussion of the findings. Further studies should be carried out by taking more variables into account and in a longitudinal pattern. Furthermore, type A personality traits should also be taken into consideration in the process of prevention and treatment of AS.

References

